A program, the one for the Milan Design Week 2020, in continuity with the April 2019 edition which registered 100,000 visitors and about 400 exhibitors protagonists of 25 different events. To remember, in particular, Din – Design In, a collective exhibition organized by Promotedesign.it which in 2019 gave voice to the projects of more than 100 designers, companies and design schools, including the Masterstudio Design of the FHNW Academy of Art and Design of Basel, the University of G. d'Annunzio of Chieti-Pescara and the NID – New Design Institute of Perugia and that in 2020 will return, for the eighth consecutive year, to the iconic location of Via Massimiano 6 / via Sbodio 9. The next edition of Din – Design In will be attended, among others, by entities such as LASALLE – College of the Arts in Singapore, High Society, innovative South Tyrolean studio that will present lamps and furnishing accessories resulting from upcycling activities focused in particular on the recovery of waste materials from the beer and coffee industries and the MASAYA by Asian Collection brand that will exhibit its special brass furnishings, whose production phases, from sculpture to casting to polishing, are entirely handmade. The presence of an area of approximately 300 square meters dedicated to the temporary shop with contemporary jewellery creations selected by Artistarjewels.com is also confirmed for 2020, also within Din – Design In.

The location of Via Conte Rosso 34 – corner Via Ventura is renewed as a hub for numerous workshops on sustainability and upcycling. Right there, in 2019, a series of activities took place to support the launch of Trash2Treasure, an online platform aimed at connecting companies – those who produce waste – with creatives, like designers, who are able to give new life to what would otherwise remain a waste. The project was born from the collaboration between Cosnova GmbH, a German make-up manufacturer, and the Latvian design agency Age5.

Even the iconic art galleries of Via Massimiano will come alive hosting international brands and design companies, which will present cutting-edge products and projects during Fuorisalone 2020.

The FuoriSalone 2020 of Lambrate Design District is at the third management of Prodes Italia, a company that has been active for years in the sectors of high jewelry, design and art, which has contributed, from edition to edition, to the growth in the number of participants and events within the district reinforcing the nature of a cosmopolitan destination, young and attentive to trends.
